

Tips For Keeping Tech

If you are worried about losing access to your diabetes technology, speak with your current team and find out why they may take funding away.

As long as you are using your technology effectively there is no reason it should be taken away from you.

Are you giving insulin regularly with food using the pump?

Are you inputting data from your sensor or glucose meter into the pump if this does not happen automatically?

Are you looking at your data and taking action to make adjustments to insulin if your levels are out of range often?

Or if your time in range is less than 70% a lot of the time?
