

TRICK OR TREATING ON THIS FRIGHTFUL HALLOWEEN

This Halloween you and your children might be heading out to a haunted house to have some spooky fun and if you have children who have type 1 diabetes this might feel a little eerie as the roads are paved with sugary treats and the cauldrons are filled with gruesome sweets.

Whilst we can't stop the witches stealing your broomsticks or ghosts raiding your pumpkin patches, our little ghouls at DigiBete have been working on a way to help you plan ahead.

In true ghoulish style they've come up with a most glorious cheat sheet to help avoid those nightmarish moments of working out a tiny sweet that has no carb information.

See their terrifyingly good table below and if you find that our naughty little ghouls have missed a sweet off the chart do let them know. You can contact them at hello@digibete.org And don't worry, they don't bite (too much!) Mwaaahhhh

TOP TIPS

Trick or treating is exercise! Especially if it's a full moon and you are being chased by those pesky werewolves. You might find your insulin needs could change slightly. Keep an eye on levels and we find running in zig zags can help disorientate the werewolves.

Make sure you can easily reach your insulin pump, CGM or Flash sensor when wearing your spookily good costume.

Have your Type 1 diabetes kit with you to keep an eye on glucose levels and you never know when you might run into a bunch of Skeletons and need to show them how you monitor your blood glucose.
